DRESSED TO IMPRESS

Even with the emphasis on work and business, wherever they went William and Kate brought a royal glamour that even Hollywood finds hard to top. Kate led the charge with her eye-turning frocks. REUTERS, REDEYE; GETTY IMAGES PHOTOS

Kate strode the red carpet in a breezy, cap-sleeved lavender gown with beading Saturday at the BAFTA Brits to Watch event in L.A.

The Duchess of Cambridge looked light as a feather at the Santa Barbara Racquet and Polo Club on Friday, opting for a floral print and strappy nude heels.

HOLLYWOOD ROYALTY

Wills and Kate make a splash in L.A.

Reuters

Prince William and his wife, Kate, went to the gritty heart of one of the world's most affluent cities Sunday with a tour of Skid Row, where thousands of homeless people live in downtown L.A.

On the final day of their three-day visit to southern California, the royal couple were given a private tour of Skid Row where, they were told, the economic recession has pushed up the number of single mothers.

It was a late addition to the royal agenda and served as preparation for a visit to the Inner-City Arts Center for children living around Skid Row, one of the largest concentrations of homeless people in the country.

It also was a stark contrast to the opulent events Saturday—a charity polo match in coastal Santa Barbara and a black-tie dinner with Hollywood royalty.

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge on their first visit as a couple to the U.S. have opted to prioritize charity and trade promotion over the glitzy, celebrity side of the entertainment capital of the world.

At the bright and airy arts center, Kate, dressed in a navy lace top and white pleated skirt from U.K. retail chain Whistles, donned a smock and painted a snail along with the kids. William, sans smock, appeared to paint something more abstract.

With all the charity work, however, celebrity never was far away, as the newlyweds networked to bring money and attention to their causes. At Saturday's gala, Tom Hanks, Nicole Kidman and Barbra Streisand were among the glitterati who turned out to support the British Academy of Film and Television Arts, of which William is president.

Kate puts her artistic skills to use Sunday at L.A.'s Inner-City Arts Center wearing a white-and-navy crocheted sweater.

TWEET OF THE WEEK

@funnyoneliners There are three kinds of lies... Lies, Damned Lies and Tweets.

Google+ can't top Facebook—yet

The hottest trend right now in social media is comparing the new Google+ to Facebook.

Stop it.

Yes, both require an Internet connection, but that's where the similarities end.

Just like we all jumped ship from MySpace to Facebook, Google wants to be the next big thing. Maybe it's too early to make the call, but I just don't see it. Make no mistake: Google+ will fare far better than Buzz and the now-defunct Wave, but a mass exodus from Facebook is unlikely.

Facebook's familiar. There's a wall. You can chat or message or poke. You can create lists to share certain things with certain people. Google responds with Circles, in which you have separate groups, and Sparks, which is a constant feed of "stuff you're really into."

Give Google+ points for Hangouts, which is a group video chat for up to 10 people. Facebook just announced video chatting by partnering with Skype, so that battle might be a fairer fight.

How can I put this kindly? Facebook is like Wal-Mart or Denny's—you know what to expect when you walk in. Google+ is like that fancy restaurant with limited reservations available. The food underwhelms and you aren't in a hurry to go back, but you might reconsider after the kitchen works out some of the kinks.

One thing Google+ has going for it is the popularity of Gmail. Once Google+ opens to everyone, the link between its email system and Google+ should be seamless. It'll need to be in order to stand a chance.

Google should be commended for not taking Facebook's domination lying down—it tried to compete once and failed, and now it's dusting itself off and giving it another go. Eventually, someone's going to win this battle, but I don't think Google is that company. I also don't think it's Yahoo or even Apple. All of those companies would accomplish more partnering as opposed to going it alone.

So, what does Google+ need to do to survive in the social media universe of 2011 and beyond?

First, Google needs to figure out how to get people signed up. It's way too confusing right now. Keep it simple and send out invites rather than making it a nasty free-for-all.

Second, keep the design simple. So far, so good.

Third, and something worth strongly considering before a wider launch: Change the name. Facebook sounds social. Google+ sounds like a calculator.

Despite my assessment, I'm not giving up on Google+. If you can get in, you should give it a try. And please add me to one or more of your circles—I'll add you back.

'APPLE PICKING'

HIDE YOUR SMARTPHONE—SPIKE IN ROBBERIES ON CTA LINKED TO GADGETS, POLICE SAY

Chicago Tribune

Robbery is up on the CTA.

The robbery rate is running higher this year, new data show, and police link the crime increase to "Apple picking" by young thugs stealing smartphones from passengers.

There were 581 robberies reported on CTA property in Chicago in 2010, averaging 48 a month. There have been 294 robberies January through May this year, an average of 59 a month and a 23 percent increase, according to the most recent statistics the Chicago Police Department released after a Tribune request.

Reports of aggravated assault and battery on CTA property are at about the same rate this year as in 2010, the police data show. Larceny and thefts, which do not involve the use of force and predominantly are pick-pocketing crimes, are averaging 143 a month this year on the CTA versus 146 a month last year, the records show.

Total crimes on the CTA rose 8 percent in 2010 compared with 2009, according to the data. Robberies climbed 19 percent.

Neither the CTA nor Chicago police track the exact number of stolen phones and electronic devices in their crime tallies. CTA property where the crimes occurred includes CTA buses and trains, rail platforms, and CTA parking lots and garages, officials said.

Police attribute the increase in robberies to crimes of opportunity involving youths ages 11-19 stealing smartphones from CTA passengers. Most of the phones taken are iPhones, said authorities, who urged CTA riders to keep their smartphones out of sight.

"The smartphone vendors are almost giving away $600 phones at $49.99 and a two-year data plan. It is really working against us," said police Cmdr. John Graeber, of the department's public transportation section. "These kids can sell the phones for $200 to pawn shops and cellphone stores."

The phone robbers frequently work the rail system and pounce on their victims quickly, usually when a train stops at a station and the doors open, officials said.

"It's happening all over the country," Graeber said. "These guys say, 'Let's go Apple picking.'"

"Here in Chicago they aren't gang members," he said. "They are opportunists, usually two or three working together, walking car to car on the train, sizing things up, looking for the phone they want, smartphone or 4G, and making a quick hit. As young as 11 years old we have taken into custody."

Cops go undercover

Chicago Tribune

Police officers working as decoys, carrying iPhones, iPods, laptop computers and other pricey electronics, are being deployed on the CTA in increasing numbers. They are being joined by more undercover officers and groups of uniformed officers dubbed "wolfpacks" who patrol hot spots on the CTA where robberies and other crimes are increasing, officials said. New crime information is being examined daily, they said.

"Even though we have seen an increase in robberies on the CTA, it would be substantially higher if we were not taking the steps we are," Chicago police Cmdr. John Graeber said.

CTA President Forrest Claypool said he didn't know the reason for the uptick in phone robberies, which included one fatality this year when a robber who snatched an iPhone from a rider on a Chicago police officer Norris Halsell patrols a CTA Red Line train stopped at Randolph/Washington.

CTA ROBBERIES UP 23 PERCENT THROUGH MAY

New statistics show a rise in crimes reported on CTA property with part of the increase blamed on "Apple picking," or theft of smartphones and other electronics.

Brown Line train fled the platform at the Fullerton station in Lincoln Park and knocked a 68-year-old woman down the stairs. She died of her injuries the next day.

Claypool said he's confident that beefed-up police patrols and an accelerated schedule to install 3,000 high-resolution video cameras at all CTA rail stations by the end of 2011 will help make CTA customers more secure.

"I'm not a sociologist, so I won't speculate on what is causing this increase on our system," he said Friday. "But this is the reason the Chicago Police Department is deploying

NEW APPROACH

Police also are attacking the CTA robbery problem by putting heat on businesses that knowingly buy stolen cellphones, to dry up the market for stolen phones. "We will go after their license," Graeber said. "We are just starting up. But at 17 locations where we instituted the operation to revoke or suspend business licenses, we were successful at nine."

more undercover officers, a visible wolfpack deterrent that can move between trains, and why the CTA is speeding up the installation of security cameras. We are trying to be agile and effective in responding to criminal activity and hooliganism, and making sure our riders can feel safe and secure on our system."

Many CTA riders appear almost clueless about making themselves look like less of a target, even though law-enforcement and the news media have tried to focus attention on the crime spree.

Graeber said he recently stopped a man who was talking on his iPhone while on the Green Line, oblivious of his surroundings, to warn him that phone robbers were operating in the area.

"I'm wearing my uniform and he said, 'Just a minute, just a minute.' Then he realizes I am a police officer," the commander said. "I told him, 'someone is going to punch you or take your phone.' We see it all day long."

Trash factor

Chicago's fight with beach litterbugs goes high-tech

Chicago Tribune

As dawn broke over Lake Michigan on a recent weekend morning, the sun glinted off the water, off the sunglasses of early morning joggers and bicyclists and—unfortunately—off the pop cans, water bottles and wrappers nestled up against fences and around poles for volleyball nets.

Beach trash. It's the downside of Chicago's vibrant lakefront.

"There's so many garbage cans around the beach, I don't understand why people can't pick up," said Jackie Carpenter of the Gold Coast. Carpenter, who was walking her dog along Oak Street Beach on a recent Sunday morning, pointed out a white towel half buried in sand.

"Towels, underwear, blankets, a shoe," she said, adding with a chuckle: "You wonder how they got home with one shoe."

Chicago Park District officials say that they have not collected an increased amount of garbage so far this season—about 25 tons on an average summer weekend. But the Park District is determined to maintain the upper hand in the war against trash, employing 60 people to clean up the beaches in three shifts, spread over 24 hours a day.

Using cutting-edge technology, the workers set out in seven trucks to comb the sands with a set of two new surf rakes that act similarly to agricultural cultivators used to plow fields. The rakes dig four inches into the sand—combing deeper than earlier models that only scraped the surface at a quarter of an inch, Park District spokeswoman Zvezdana Kubat said. The deeper combing exposes bacteria from trash to UV light and oxygen, which helps decrease bacteria that could affect swimming waters, Kubat said.

On a recent early Sunday morning, a truck could be seen dragging the sands of Montrose Beach. Dogs and their owners mingled to the north at the dog beach, volleyball players and seagulls congregated in the south.

"I think [the beaches] are fine," said Sergio Rodriguez, 35, of the South Loop, as he got ready to play a game of volleyball. "I haven't seen anything that's turned me away."

At the 63rd Street Beach, fresh rake tracks marked the nearly empty beach. The only signs of unchecked trash lay behind the fenced-off ecosystem restoration area, where Cheetos bags, coffee cups and pop cans, among other debris, were caught in the marram grasses.

"The biggest thing that people can do to help us out and help keep the beaches clean is not littering and disposing of trash in proper receptacles," Kubat said. "The research we've found shows that trash on the beach attracts gulls to loaf, and then they defecate on the sand and in the water. And that increases the rate of swim ban occurrences."

911 operator dies in crash

A 911 operator who was driving home after completing her shift died following a multi-vehicle crash in Bucktown on Sunday morning, police said. The accident occurred about 6 a.m. near Armitage and Hoyne avenues, police said.

Suspicious package near the Bean

A man has been charged in connection with a suspicious package left near the Cloud Gate sculpture Saturday night in Millennium Park that prompted an evacuation and an hours-long disruption of downtown traffic.

Flight diverted to O'Hare

A United Airlines flight en route to Frankfurt, Germany, was diverted to O'Hare early Sunday morning after crew members found a sticker with a threatening message in a lavatory on the plane, an airline spokesman said.

Dave brings crowds to Southeast Side

On Saturday, the U.S. Steel South Works plant on the Southeast Side was back on the map and alive with music when thousands of concertgoers arrived for the second day of the Dave Matthews Band Caravan.

Violent crime down 4 percent

Violent and property crimes in Chicago have dropped for the 30th consecutive month, with overall crime dropping by more than 4 percent in June compared with last year's numbers, according to Chicago police officials. TRIBUNE

Riverboat tragedy

6 KAZAN, Russia About 100 people were missing after a tourist boat sank in Russia's Volga River on Sunday, killing at least two people, emergency services officials said.

A survivor said the two-decked, 56-year-old riverboat sank fast in a thunderstorm after listing onto its side, and that many were dead, Interfax news agency reported.

Rescuers searched choppy waters in a broad stretch of the river as daylight faded and tearful survivors, rescued by a passing craft, greeted anxious relatives on shore.

The boat was heading to the Tatarstan regional capital, Kazan, 500 miles east of Moscow, when it sank about 2 miles from shore in 60 feet of water, the ministry's regional branch said.

The boat "leaned onto its right side, turned over in literally three minutes and went to the bottom," Interfax quoted a man who was rescued by the passing boat as saying after it docked in Kazan.

"There was thunder and heavy rain at the time. There are very many dead," the man, who said his wife and son drowned, was quoted as saying. There were tears and cries of anguish as survivors met relatives waiting at the dock in Kazan.

U.S. 5, BRAZIL 3 (PENALTY KICKS)

INSTANT CLASSIC

U.S. women outlast Brazil in stirring World Cup quarterfinal

From news services

Where were you when the U.S. women beat Brazil on Sunday to move on to the semifinals of the women's World Cup?

Yes, it was that kind of moment. In one of the most riveting games in the history of the tourney, the U.S. beat Brazil 5-3 on penalty kicks after the game ended 2-2.

Abby Wambach tied it in the 122nd minute—the latest goal in World Cup history—and goalkeeper Hope Solo denied the Brazilians again.

"We believe we can win this tournament," Wambach said. "I don't know if you can write a better script."

The drama unfolded like this.

» Brazil's Daiane gave the U.S. a 1-0 lead when she scored in her team's own goal in the game's second minute.

» Known as the best in the world, Brazil's Marta made a dangerous run into the box in the 65th minute, beating two U.S. defenders before Rachel Buehler dragged her down. Referee Jacqui Melksham not only ruled it a penalty but also gave her a red card.

» Brazil's Cristiane took the penalty

REMEMBER WHEN?

The U.S. women most recently won the World Cup in 1999. And that game provided one of the most iconic moments in soccer history. At the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., the U.S. and China went to penalty kicks to decide the champion. Brandi Chastain won it for the Americans in the shootout and ripped off her jersey, exposing her sports bra, during her celebration. The date? Also July 10. Cue eerie music. REDEYE kick. Solo made a perfect read and batted it away. But Melksham ordered the penalty retaken—and gave Solo a yellow card, even though replays showed the American hadn't left her line.

» As the pro-American crowd of 25,598 jeered and whistled Marta got the best of Solo, burying the ball to tie the game at 1.

» In the second minute of extra time, Marta scored her second goal of the game for a 2-1 lead that would have sent the Americans to their earliest exit ever. But Brazil's Erika stalled when she went down on a tackle, and the dilly-dallying added three minutes of stoppage time to the game.

» Two minutes into stoppage time, Megan Rapinoe sent a perfect cross from the left side that Wambach, one of the best players in the world in the air, headed into the near side of the net for another tie.

» During penalty kicks, the Americans made their first three only to have Cristiane and Marta match them. But then it was Daiane's turn. She took a hard shot, but Solo stretched out and batted it away.

» Rapinoe smoked the net with a blast and Ali Krieger converted hers to seal it for the U.S.

"Phenomenal," U.S. coach Pia Sundhage said. "Somebody's writing this book. It speaks to the American attitude."

1 What do you think of baseball's Home Run Derby?	I'm in the camp that says it messes with a guy's swing. Like in golf when your mistresses start coming forward.	Needs more. Maybe pro wrestling announcers? "Oh baby, he sent that one STRAIGHT. TO. HELL!"	Adam Dunn should be in it, you know, for laughs.	Isn't that what they call it when a Cubs pitcher takes the mound?	I love watching the kids in the outfield try to catch the balls. Bless their hearts.
2 What sport has the best All-Star game?	If you include the pregame, after-party, after-after-party and the hotel lobby, hands down it's the NBA.	The NBA, no question. Debauchery all over and the game turns itself into "NBA Jam."	Professional wrestling has Wrestlemania, which body-slams the other all-star gatherings.	The sport of dating Kim Kardashian. At least until Kris Humphries was picked for the game.	"Super Mario All-Stars." The best ever. In one convenient game.
3 What's wrong with NBA players playing in Europe during a lockout?	Nothing. Just weigh your decision against the shame of being labeled the Michael Jordan of Turkish basketball.	Nothing. I can't wait to see Derrick Rose and the Schalzburg Schnitzels.	Imagine all the international paternity suits to come.	Quick, someone tell Alfonso Soriano there's an MLB lockout now.	Swimming the Atlantic probably will tire them out before the season starts.
4 What did we learn from the Blackhawks' prospect camp?	Let's just hope they can inspire us. You know, to form a mob and start flipping over cars.	That I need a better social life so I don't have to watch Blackhawks' prospect camp.	The Blackhawks have prospects? Shut the front door.	We learned there was a prospects camp thanks to two bad baseball teams and two lockouts.	The kids can play. In prospects camp, at least.
5 Flopping in soccer is like ...	... crying to get your way. And yet flopping works, and no amount of crying has given me a jet pack.	... eating cole slaw with your hands at a BBQ. You're embarrassing yourself, man!	... any time Dwyane Wade took a charge in the NBA playoffs.	... playing like Chris Bosh. Biggest difference—women soccer players do it in a tougher way.	... Leo faking an injury to get out of the company kickball game so he can attend the "Harry Potter" premiere.

Who needs the break?

RedEye

The All-Star Game allows baseball to focus on its successful players and shines the light on individual successes. But what about those left behind? Like the Cubs and White Sox. Both teams enter the break playing at not exactly a high level. The Cubs are the second-worst team in the league. And the Sox are third in the AL Central—technically still alive but not playing like it. How do the players feel about their teams at the halfway point of the season? Let them tell you. TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED.

"If we don't play better, if we don't start getting it together, I have a hard time believing that we'll win the division."

White Sox first baseman Paul Konerko

"It's been a rough first half of the year. You can't deny that, you can't go away from that. Right now, the job is to have a better second half, and just get better overall. Get better with the kids."

Cubs manager Mike Quade

"I need the break. I need to re-group physically and have better stuff than I've been running out there with. It's been a grind, these last three since the Colorado start."

Sox pitcher Jake Peavy

"Baffling, frustrating—use whatever adjective you want to use. ... We got to keep fighting. We're lucky. We're not out of it. We're not dead and still have life."

Sox catcher A.J. Pierzynski

"We wished we'd played better in the first half. We can still end the season on a good note. A lot of games left, and a long summer left. We'll come back rested and ready."

Cubs pitcher Sean Marshall

"I hope everyone goes and clears their heads and focuses on the task at hand. As you said, one day at a time—we're looking at a future goal, but you can't look at the big picture at the same time."

Sox pitcher Will Ohman

"Just take those 70 games every day as hard as we can and forget about the game we played. We have to start thinking about what's going to happen next, not what happened before."

Sox manager Ozzie Guillen

» The Blackhawks avoided salary arbitration with Viktor Stalberg when they agreed to terms with the winger on a two-year contract Sunday. The 25-year-old Stalberg had 12 goals, 12 assists and 43 penalty minutes in 77 regular-season games with the Hawks last season.

» Luke Donald warmed up for this week's British Open with a 9-under 63 on Sunday to win the Scottish Open by four strokes. The 33-year-old Englishman and Northwestern grad finished at 19 under.

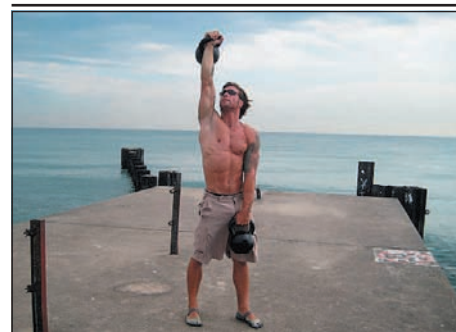

» France's Thomas Voeckler seized the Tour de France lead in a crash-ridden ninth stage Sunday as favorite Alberto Contador suffered an early spill before getting back on the saddle. He is 16th overall.

» N.Y. Liberty 80, Sky 73

» Bengals player Adam "Pacman" Jones arrested early Sunday after incident at bar in Cincinnati.

Let's do lunch

Downtown restaurants ready for your next break

By Lisa Arnett

There's something about summertime days that render your usual practice of eating reheated leftovers at your desk completely unacceptable. Whether you need a quick sandwich or have time for a long leisurely lunch, these eateries in River North, the Loop and South Loop deserve a spot on your to-do list.

For wallet-friendly deals

Bin 36

339 N. Dearborn St. 312-755-9463

This River North wine bar's always been a solid standby for wine after work, but a rotating $5 lunch deal from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. weekdays makes it a fine pick on the Thursday before payday. A different dish is featured each week throughout the summer, including a hummus plate (through Friday), Nicoise salad (July 25-29), steak sandwich (Aug. 1-5) and wood-grilled burger (Aug. 22-26).

Bodega N. 5

636 S. Michigan Ave. 312-765-0524

Fill up on the cheap at this little sibling to Mercat a la Planxa, where all daytime eats are $5 apiece. Nosh on a sandwich with smoked turkey and bacon to tuna salad with celery-caper aioli, or go for a roasted veggie flatbread. Closed Sundays and Mondays.

For summer Fridays

Tribute

800 S. Michigan Ave. 312-957-0000

This new eatery inside the Essex Inn serves up Grant Park views with lunchtime sandwiches, ($9-$11) with include a cheese steak sandwich with provolone fondue ($11) or the dressed-up patty melt with shitake mushrooms and shallot marmalade. If summer hours get you out of the office by 1 p.m., you won't have to resist talking a stroll in the park after you pay the check.

OUTDOOR SEATING!

Epic

112 W. Hubbard St. 312-222-4940

This River North stunner just revamped its lunch menu, adding light and summery plates such as heirloom tomato gazpacho ($7) and sweet corn salad ($8) to help you warm up for a big ol' burger with gouda, prosciutto and fried egg on a pretzel bun ($14). Time your meal accordingly and you can head up to the rooftop lounge, which opens at 2 p.m., for cocktails after.

Union Sushi & Barbeque Bar
LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

For a fun business lunch

OUTDOOR SEATING!

GT Fish & Oyster

531 N. Wells St. 312-929-3501

This nautical-chic River North spot's daytime menu is just as seafood-centric as at dinnertime, with choices such as curry shrimp spring rolls ($9), fish and chips ($13) and fish tacos ($13). If it's on your expense account, go straight for the $22 lobster roll.

Union Sushi & Barbeque Bar

230 W. Erie St. 312-662-4888

Lunch kicks off Monday at this River North eatery that serves freshly sliced sushi alongside kushiyaki (meat and seafood cooked on a sizzling robata grill). Bento box lunches ($15) combine soup and salad with kushiyaki or maki. Emulate daytime cocktailing without returning to your desk tipsy with a Pimm's cup-like ginger lemonade with a dash of bitters.

When you're sick of Subway

Jersey Mike's

200 W. Monroe St. 312-263-0830

When you order any cold sub (we liked the tasty original Italian with provolone, ham, salami, pepperoni, prosciuttini and cap-pacuolo, $6.95 for regular size), staffers will ask you if you want it "Mike's Way," which means with shredded lettuce, onions, tomatoes, red-wine vinegar, olive oil and spices. You should say yes.

OUTDOOR SEATING!

Which Wich?

108 N. State St. 312-658-0030

Down on the pedway level of Block 37, this multiple-choice sandwich shop is perfect for days when you just can't stand to get too chatty with the staff about what you do or don't want. Grab a Sharpie and elect all of your choices, from white or wheat bread to extras such as double meat or avocado and toppings from pepper jack to horseradish mayo to sauerkraut.

For health nuts

Protein Bar

352 N. Clark St. 312-527-0450

Hit up the recently opened River North location of this locally owned health-centric cafe for a carryout lunch that won't undo last night's gym sesh. Bar-ritos, a slimmed-down take on a burrito made with a whole-wheat wrap and protein-packed quinoa instead of rice, come in variations such as the Steakhouse ($6.60) with organic beef, blue cheese and cranberries, or the Green City Vegan ($6.35) with avocado, tomatoes and chickpeas.

Curried

171 N. Wells St. 312-977-9999

Recently moved to this downtown location from Rogers Park, this counter-service Indian eatery doles out lunch dishes such as Tandoori chicken salad ($6.99) and mixed veggie curry ($7.99) on the double.

'Eureka' blasts off

Niall Matter found the perfect role when he joined the cast of "Eureka."

"I'm not unlike Zane in a lot of ways," the 30-year-old said of Zane Donovan, the snarky, bad-boy physicist he's played since the second season of the Syfy series about a town of genius inventors and scientists.

Matter isn't a physicist, but he knows computers well enough to have recently fixed co-star Neil Grayston's. His eight years working on Canadian oil rigs when he was younger prepared him for the action-hero-worthy stunts he gets to do as Zane. Finally, he admits, he still has "that little flair of a troublemaker" that led his parents to send him away when he was 17.

"When I auditioned for this role ... I just thought, 'Really, this is like spot-on,'" he told me during a recent phone interview, laughing. "I knew right away that I'd be playing this guy."

As Season 4.5 blasts off at 7 p.m. Monday, Zane's she-

SYFY MONDAYS

Syfy is making Mondays its destination for scripted series with "Eureka" and:

>> Warehouse 13, 8 p.m. Aaron Ashmore joins the warehouse team, but with a mysterious new baddie surfacing, they'll have to do more than snag, bag and tag those wacky artifacts.

>> Alphas, 9 p.m. This mash-up of "Heroes," "X-Men" and every police procedural on TV benefits from the casting of David Strathairn, but fails to spark much excitement in its premiere.

nanigans accidentally cause the launch of an old rocket into space, with Fargo (Grayston) and himself onboard.

"Liftoff" is Matter's favorite of this new batch of 10 episodes, in which the actor seems to be getting more and more screen time. Matter talked more about the upcoming episodes, his "bad kid" childhood and how he nearly died in an oil rig accident. Visit showpatroltv.com.

OTHER MONDAY PREMIERES

The Closer

8 p.m. on TNT

Kyra Sedgwick begins her final season as LAPD investigator Brenda Leigh Johnson with a case that doesn't exactly grip, but Mary McDonnell returns as Captain Raydor, whose latest internal affairs probe involves Brenda.

Man vs. Wild

8 p.m. on Discovery

Bear Grylls takes Jake Gyllenhaal to Iceland, where they hike glaciers, cross between two peaks via a rope and battle a terrible snowstorm. I hope they huddle close to keep each other warm.

Anthony Bourdain: No Reservations

8 p.m. on Travel

The traveling chef takes us on a "forbidden tour" of Cuba for the mid-Season 7 premiere, in which he checks out Cuba's classic cars, engages in a debate with baseball fans and, yes, eats.

Rizzoli & Isles

9 p.m. on TNT

Season 2 begins with Rizzoli (Angie Harmon) recuperating from her self-inflicted gunshot wound, which would go a lot better if Isles (Sasha Alexander) and everyone else just stopped fussing over her.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Cancer

June 22-July 22
Someone stuffy is really bothering you. Maybe your conservative neighbor is giving you dirty looks for having such noisy, regular sex in your apartment. Venus says screw 'em. (Not literally.)

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Your significant other might be pressuring you to make a commitment. You'll move in together, but you're keeping separate bank accounts. Mars is giving you cold feet.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

The moon is egging you on, forcing you to stand up for yourself. If your partner has turned into a total d-bag, it could be time to ditch the relationship. Don't play nursemaid, mother or babysitter. It's all equals, all the way—or you're out of there.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

A business situation just went all kablooey on you, and your financial status is starting to look dire. Mars is telling you to think on your feet and act fast. You can still fix things if you work hard. Meanwhile, ask that overly demanding lover for a rain check.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You could be madly attracted to someone who reminds you of a past lover. The moon says avoid crushes on people who aren't who they appear to be.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

A frisky moon is heating up your libido. You'll schedule six dates in 14 hours between sending sexy text messages to everybody. You're acting like a squirrel in heat. Fortunately, most people will find this rather cute.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

With Venus still opposite your sign, you're not sure how you really feel about that certain someone. Maybe you're cautiously optimistic—but shouldn't you feel greater clarity about this romance if it's really meant to be? Keep sorting it out.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Uranus is making things kinky. Your lover will show up with boxing gloves and ask to fight with you, naked. Your girlfriend will ask you to pretend you're a swash-buckling pirate, a cowboy or George Clooney. It's best just to say yes.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You're clashing with someone over politics, religion or general moral issues. If you're fighting with your romantic partner, you could come across a few deal breakers that could affect how you feel about this relationship. Finding out the truth is a good thing, really.

Aries March 21-April 19

An exhibitionist moon has you showing off your latest sexy fling in public. You might be dating someone overweight, out of shape or simply odd-looking—but you don't care. This is your honey, and you're madly in lust.

Taurus April 20-May 20

People around you are encouraging you to try something new. You're not quite ready to have an affair with a married guy, but you're probably willing to try something equally risky. Saturn is telling you to go for it.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Yesterday your lover wanted to marry you. Today she's not that into you. The moon is creating painful complications.

Calories lurking in summer treats

MCT

Fresh fruits and vegetables abound in the summer, but so do some diet wreckers. "Barbecues, cookouts and picnics are built for grazing," says Marisa Moore, a registered dietitian and spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association. Here are some common trouble spots.

Summer 'salads'

Potato salad, pasta salad and coleslaw might sound healthy, but they can be high in calories and fat. Half a cup of potato salad, for example, can pack 200 calories. Keep portions small or lighten salads by cutting mayonnaise content in half—you can sub in nonfat Greek yogurt—and adding mustard and diced vegetables for flavor.

Frozen drinks

A 20-ounce fruit smoothie can run 500 calories, while a 16-ounce iced coffee concoction can add 400. Order small sizes, ask for coffee drinks with nonfat milk and no whipped cream and make homemade smoothies with fresh fruit, ice and nonfat yogurt.

Mixed drinks

Margaritas, daiquiris and other mixed drinks are high in sugar and can easily top 400 calories. Stick to wine spritzers, light beer or sparkling water with a twist of lime, and alternate alcoholic beverages with water. But remember: doctors recommend no more than one drink a day for women and two for men.

Frozen mixed drinks are high in sugar and can easily top 400 calories.

Cookout spreads

Research shows the more food you have in front of you, the more you'll eat. Look over everything before you start loading your plate. Then fill up with fruits, vegetables and lean meats such as grilled chicken or fish, along with small portions of your favorite treats. And spend more time mingling and playing games than eating!

Festival foods

You'll run into plenty of burgers, ice cream and funnel cakes. Tame cravings—and beat crowds—by heading to a festival just after breakfast, or have a small, healthy snack beforehand. Scope out healthier options such as real fruit pops or grilled corn on the cob, and split less healthy fare.

Lo and behold

Surprise! Cee Lo Green performs unexpected set at Paris Club

Most nightclubs would have heavily promoted a scheduled appearance by "Forget You" singer Cee Lo Green. They would have placed an ad in the newspapers with Green's photo in advance and announced on Twitter and Facebook that they had booked the "Voice" judge.

Paris Club, however, opted to take a different route.

The new French restaurant in River North simply announced Wednesday that a surprise guest would take the stage at its newly opened upper-level club, Studio Paris, later that night. No clues were given until hours before the performance when co-owner R.J. Melman tweeted a photo of a microphone with the caption, "Who's voice will be singing on this mic @StudioParisChi tonight?"

It wasn't until the 300 or so VIP guests arrived—including the White Sox's Gordon Beckham, Mark Teahen and Brent Morel and Sacramento Kings co-owner George Maloof Jr.—that most learned about the surprise performer's identity.

"We wanted a fun surprise for our guests that were there that night," Melman said by email. "Expect this [to be] a sign of things to come at Studio Paris."

Green kicked off his six-song set with "Bright Lights Bigger City" and ended with the non-censored version of "Forget You" before relaxing with his entourage, including Goodie Mob rapper Big Gipp, until closing.

'THE VOICE' UPDATE

Cee Lo Green recently wrapped the first season of "The Voice" and has signed on for the second season (Chicago auditions take place Friday and Saturday at Navy Pier). Green also reportedly has been offered a judge position with the British version of the show. "They asked me not to speak about it," Green told me while sitting in his booth. "It's not official yet."

THE DIGIT

$47 million

That's the second-weekend earnings for "Transformers: Dark of the Moon," making the third movie in the franchise No. 1 again. It has now made $261 million domestically.

MEGA MAMMAS

Two brand-new bundles of joy were battling for the headlines this weekend. Kate Hudson (right) gave birth to her second son Saturday night, online.com reports, and Victoria (inset) and David Beckham finally added a girl to their brood of three boys Sunday morning. Names haven't been announced for either baby, but we're sure both moms are accepting suggestions.

Deja 'Dallas'

Oil barons never die, they just go to TNT. J.R. Ewing and his warring family from the 1980s soap "Dallas" will return to TV in summer 2012, TNT announced Friday. Larry Hagman, Patrick Duffy and Linda Gray will reprise their roles as warring brothers J.R. and Bobby Ewing, and J.R.'s often drunk ex, Sue Ellen, respectively. The new series will focus on their offspring. Get a sneak peek of the show during Monday's episodes of "The Closer" and "Rizzoli & Isles."

Smooch moves

In the Season 2 finale of NBC's "Community," Abed gave Annie a Han Solo-style kiss. Chicago native Danny Pudi, who plays Abed, thinks that might be why he and co-star Alison Brie were asked to work with Lenovo and dosomething.org on a scavenger hunt project that begins Monday to encourage volunteerism. "Does it have something to do with the fact that we're really great kissers? Probably," he told RedEye on Friday. Read more about the project at dosomething.org/hunt, and from Pudi at showpatroltv.com.

'Horrible You?'

Think Jennifer Aniston and Colin Farrell were horrible? Brett Ratner, producer of "Horrible Bosses," told The Hollywood Reporter that Ashton Kutcher, Ryan Reynolds and Johnny Knoxville were among the actors briefly attached the flick, which grossed $28.1 million this weekend. And while there's no sequel set, Ratner joked that "Horrible Wives" and "Horrible Children" would make great movies. What, no "Horrible Husbands"?

Rihanna

Too hot to handle

We knew Rihanna was smokin', but seriously? The singer had to cancel her Dallas concert midway through her performance of "California King Bed" on Friday when a fire broke out above the stage, people.com reports. The arena was safely evacuated, and Ri-Ri later tweeted: "DALLAS!!! We set the stage on FYAH tonight!!!! LITERALLY!!!!"
